Primary Land Development and Urban Renewal

In the area of real estate and construction, “primary land development and urban renewal” projects have gained more attention from governments, property owners and real estate developers. Through primary land development and urban renewal projects, governments achieve their goals of land maturation and old area renovation, and property owners and real estate developers, as major participants, gain benefits.

JunHe’s real estate and construction team has vast experience in the field of primary land development and urban renewal. Our lawyers provide great legal services and are also in possession of comprehensive industry knowledge, enabling them to provide strong support and professional services to their clients. Our lawyers use both Chinese and English as their working languages and can communicate smoothly with domestic and foreign clients, which is helpful for clients to realize their business goals.

Clients of our primary land development and urban renewal projects cover large-size domestic and foreign real estate developers, financial institutions and local governments. JunHe has participated in many unprecedented representative projects, winning high praise from our clients.

The legal services provided by JunHe in real estate equity merger projects include:

- Assessment and optimization of transaction schemes: assisting clients with an analysis of the pros and cons of different transaction schemes and paths for clients’ optimization of transaction structures and steps;
- Conducting due diligence investigations: conducting legal due diligence investigations and providing DD reports;
- Preparing transaction documents: drafting, reviewing and modifying various transaction documents (e.g., primary land development entrustment agreements, land acquisition and reserve agreements, land consolidation and preparation agreements, urban renewal cooperation agreements, expropriation compensation agreements);
- Participating in business negotiations: carrying out negotiations with counterparties on behalf of clients;

JunHe, founded in Beijing in 1989, is one of the first private partnership law firms in China. Since its establishment, JunHe has grown to be a large and recognized Chinese law firm. The firm has twelve offices around the world and a team comprised of more than a thousand professionals.
