Professional Experience

Mr. Zhang specializes in civil and commercial litigation and legal counseling. His practice areas include contract law, company law, insurance law, note law, product quality law, tort law, general rules of civil law, and other areas of civil and commercial law.

From July 2002 to June 2008, Mr. Zhang worked as an assistant to a judge and an assistant judge at the third civil court (formerly the economy court) and the second civil court of Beijing Dongcheng District Court. During this time, he was awarded the Outstanding Civil Servant and Advanced Person award for three consecutive years. The case analyses and legal research he wrote won prizes in various competitions in the court system. These case analyses were selected as guiding cases in the court system and have been published in various journals such as the People's Court Daily, the People's Procuratorate Daily, and the Chinese Lawyer. For almost five years, he worked on thousands of civil and commercial cases involving disputes over contracts, companies, finance, insurance and real estate.

Mr. Zhang joined the dispute resolution team of JunHe in August 2008. Since then, he has dealt with hundreds of civil and commercial litigation and arbitration cases as well as enforcement cases, criminal reports and government investigations. He has also provided emergency management, legal counseling, compliance examination and long-term legal advice to various clients.
